MASS INTENTIONS

MEDITATION OF THE DAY

Willing to Suffer for the Carpenter's Son

According to Chrysostom, there are three requirements for sainthood, and Agatha was perfect in all three—namely, cleanness of heart, the presence of the Holy Spirit, and abundance of good works....

The virgin Agatha was highborn, and a great beauty, living in the city of Catania, where she worshiped God at all times and in all holiness. Quintianus, the consular official in Sicily, who was baseborn, libidinous, greedy, and a worshiper of idols, was determined to get her in his grasp. Being of low degree he would gain respect by lording it over a noble. Her beauty would satisfy his libido, he would steal her riches to feed his avarice, and, being pagan, he would force her to sacrifice to the gods. So he had her brought before him and quickly perceived the firmness of her resolution. He therefore turned her over to a procurer, whose name was Aphrodisia, and her nine daughters....He gave them thirty days to overcome her resistance. They tried to change her mind, at times by promising her pleasure, at others by threatening her with pain. They hoped to win her over from her good resolve, but blessed Agatha said to them: "My determination is built on rock and founded in Christ! Your promises are raindrops, your threats are rivers, and however hard they beat upon this, she prayed and wept day after day, thirsting to attain the palm of martyrdom. Aphrodisia saw that her will could not be shaken, and told Quintianus: "It would be easier to split rocks or reduce iron to the softness of lead than to move or recall that girl's mind from its Christian intention."

Then Quintianus summoned her again. "What is your social standing?" he asked. She answered: "I am freeborn and of illustrious lineage, as my ancestry attests." Quintianus: "If you are so highborn, why does the way you live make you seem to be of servile status?" Her answer: "I am the slave of Christ, therefore, I show myself as a person in service... To be a slave of Christ is proof of the highest nobility..." Quintianus exclaimed, "Sacrifice to the gods or prepare to suffer!" Agatha: "If you promise me the wild beasts, the sound of Christ's name will gentle them! If you try fire, angels will serve me with a healing dew from heaven! If you resort to wounds and torments, I have the Holy Spirit, through whom I make naught of all that!"...To jail she went, happy and triumphant, as if invited to a banquet, and commended her trial to the Lord.

Blessed Jacobus De Voragine

Blessed Jacobus de Voragine (+ 1298) was a Dominican friar, Archbishop of Genoa, Italy, and an esteemed peacemaker and father to the poor. The above text comes from the Golden Legend, his medieval compilation of stories about the saints.
